Desperate Times Call For Desperate Measures

At the outbreak of civil disobedience that we refer to as the Civil War President Lincoln found himself faced with taking desperate measures to preserve the union. For instance, President Lincoln was requested of General McClellan to declare martial law in Saint Louis Missouri on November 20th, 1861. General McClellan requesting:

*ST LOUIS November 20 1861 (Received Nov 20th)
GENERAL MCCLELLAN
For the President of the United States*

*No written authority is found here to declare and enforce martial law in this department. Please send me such written authority and telegraph me that it has been sent by mail.
H.W. HALLECK Major General*

Authorization was given the next day
(November 21, 1861) by President Lincoln:

*If General McClellan and General Halleck deem it necessary to declare and maintain martial law in Saint Louis the same is hereby authorized.
A. LINCOLN*

This authorization was followed up by a broader authorization to suspend habeas corpus on December 2nd of 1861:

*MA JOR GENERAL HW HALLECK, Commanding in the Department of Missouri.
GENERAL:*

As an insurrection exists in the United States and is in arms in the State of Missouri you are hereby authorized and empowered to suspend the writ of habeas corpus within the limits of the military division under your command and to exercise martial law as you find it necessary in your discretion to secure the public safety and the authority of the United States.

I propose that President Trump finds himself in much the same situation within certain departments operating under his authority. President Lincoln put the preservation and restoration of the Republic as his chief goal. Serving as the “Transition President,” I believe that President Trump is doing the same.

Know this: The “cunning, ambitious and unprincipled men” that President Trump is fighting against, continue to control the mainstream media and control many corporate government departments by use of the Senior Executive Service (SES). This is not only extremely dangerous to the President and his family, but also to the public safety and the authority of the United States.

Is it time for President Trump to take desperate measures within certain corporate government departments? I cannot answer that question, but the question must be posed to President Trump. He is the spearhead of the Republic. The American People need to continue to rally around him and realize that he is in continuous danger.

In closing, please remember to keep the Republic and President Trump in your prayers.

epilogue

Ask yourself this question. If you were “cunning, ambitious and unprincipled,” extremely wealthy and power hungry do the degree you wanted to take over control of the United States Corporation how would you do it? I propose it was done as outlined below:

1. Your goal would be to take over every agency of government, top down.
2. You would influence the power brokers in Washington to lay the legislative groundwork using your money to bribe or gathering intelligence on and blackmailing them to do your bidding.
3. Assume you were able to establish control over every government agency by having a President, under your control, appoint people over every agency who would not be accountable to anyone besides yourself, since you have the goods on each of the appointees.
4. Bingo, you’re done.

May I propose that this process has already been done right under the noses of every American. It's called the Senior Executive Service (SES.) Now, ask yourself why nothing gets accomplished for the benefit of the American People in Washington. You should be able to answer your question knowing the above information. Maybe, you better understand why I have published the above as a “desperate measure” that President Trump may have to undertake to begin the transition back to our Republican Form of Governance.
